

From April 25 to 28, 2025, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1,175 U.S. likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, geography, and recalled presidential vote. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error associated with the sample size is  $\pm 3$  percentage points. Results for subgroups of the sample are subject to increased margins of error. Partisanship reflected in tabulations is based on self-identified party affiliation, not partisan registration. For more information please visit dataforprogress.org/our-methodology.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=1,175 unless otherwise specified.

[9] The Supreme Court recently ruled that the federal government must facilitate the return of a Maryland man — an immigrant who had been living in the U.S. with legal status — who was mistakenly deported and is now being held in a prison in El Salvador. The administration has said it has fulfilled its obligations and has cited the man's alleged gang ties, but he remains imprisoned abroad.

Should the government be required to take further steps to comply with the Court's ruling?
