

From March 6 to 8, 2026, Data for Progress, in partnership with the Institute for Middle East Understanding and Demand Progress, conducted a survey of 1,251 U.S. likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, geography, and recalled presidential vote. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error associated with the sample size is ±3 percentage points. Results for subgroups of the sample are subject to increased margins of error. Partisanship reflected in tabulations is based on self-identified party affiliation, not partisan registration. For more information please visit <https://dataforprogress.org/our-methodology>.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=1,251 unless otherwise specified.

[7] President Trump has not received authorization from Congress to declare war on Iran. Some Members of Congress have introduced legislation, called a war powers resolution, that would restrict the President's ability to order further military action against Iran without congressional approval, in accordance with the Constitution. [10] SPLIT A:

Next, imagine a hypothetical general election for U.S. Congress occurring in your district between a Democrat and a Republican. Regarding the government's support of Israel, both the Democrat and Republican candidates say that it is important for the United States to stand with Israel and support the actions Israel says it needs to defend itself. This includes prioritizing weapons and military support to assist Israel, including in Gaza and Iran.
