

DATA FOR PROGRESS

From January 6 to January 7, 2021, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1156 likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, and voting history. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error is  $\pm 2.9$  percentage points.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

[7] Some lawmakers think oil, gas, and coal companies should receive billions in federal aid in future coronavirus relief packages.

Some have argued that the Federal Reserve, the central bank of the United States, should not allocate any funds toward the fossil fuel industry because it was in financial trouble and losing jobs before the pandemic. They say we should focus on funding jobs in clean energy rather than continue to bail out companies that contribute to climate change.

Others say that the government should keep supporting the fossil fuel industry to prevent more job losses during the coronavirus economic crisis.

Do you support or oppose the Federal Reserve directing federal aid to fossil fuel companies?
