

DATA FOR PROGRESS

From October 6 to 9, 2021, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1,250 likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, and voting history. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error is ± 3 percentage points.

N=1,250 unless otherwise specified. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

[2] President Biden will soon announce his picks to lead the Federal Reserve, the central banking system of the U.S. Supporters of appointing women to these roles say that a significant barrier to our economic recovery from the pandemic is women returning to the workforce, and that Biden has shown his commitment to addressing this by naming women to the top financial and economic roles in his administration. Thinking about this, would you support or oppose President Biden appointing a diverse team of women to the top three leadership roles at the Federal Reserve?	Strongly support	27%	49%	20%	7

[3] The Federal Reserve, the nation's central bank, took significant action to support the economy during the pandemic. Recently, multiple senior Federal Reserve officials resigned after acknowledging that they had traded stocks and real estate assets while shaping the Federal Reserve's efforts to rescue financial markets. Some lawmakers are proposing that President Biden should nominate a new Federal Reserve Chair and new officials who were not involved in these actions to limit conflicts of interest and increase public trust in the bank. Opponents of this proposal say that there are already ethical rules in place to stop this type of activity and that the rules, rather than the people, should be changed if they are insufficient.
