[3] The American Families Plan is a $1.8 trillion proposal to invest in families, workers, and education over the next ten years.

Supporters of the proposal say that to build a stronger economy, we need to invest in our workers, families, and caretakers — through child care and paid family leave — just like we invest in our nation's roads and bridges.

Opponents of the proposal say that right now we need to reduce our national deficit and leave these policy decisions to the states, instead of pursuing unnecessary spending and tax increases right after a pandemic.
