

From May 3 to 9, 2022, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1,001 likely voters in New York using SMS and web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, geography, and voting history. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error is ±3 percentage points.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=1,001 unless otherwise specified.

[3] Some New York State lawmakers have introduced the Good Cause Eviction bill that would ban evictions without reasonable cause.

This would mean that no landlord can evict a tenant unless there is a good cause, such as not paying rent. It would allow tenants to remain in their homes unless the landlord has a "good cause" for them to leave, and require landlords to justify large rent increases.

Do you support or oppose this bill?

Would you be more or less likely to vote for a state lawmaker if they voted to pass the Good Cause Eviction bill?
