

DATA FOR PROGRESS

From January 13 to 15, 2023, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1,198 American adults using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of American adults by age, gender, education, race, geography, and voting history. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error is ± 3 percentage points.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=1,198 unless otherwise specified.

[2] A recent Stanford University study found that emissions from gas-burning stoves create more hazardous indoor air quality conditions and contain more greenhouse gasses than previously thought. Exposure to these emissions, which contain methane and nitrogen dioxide, has been shown to increase risk of asthma and other respiratory diseases, particularly in children.

Would you support or oppose giving the Consumer Product Safety Commission authority to regulate safe levels of emissions for gas-burning stoves?
