

DATA FOR PROGRESS

From September 8 to October 2, 2023, Data for Progress conducted two surveys totaling 2,439 respondent interviews of likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The samples were weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, geography, and voting history. The surveys were conducted in English. The margin of error is ±2 percentage points.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=2,439 unless otherwise specified.

[3] Some lawmakers are proposing that the federal government should take an active role in regulating the economy, checking the abuses of corporations on consumers and workers, ensuring that markets are competitive, and holding the wealthy accountable for paying their fair share in taxes. They say this would grow the economy from the bottom up and the middle out.

When thinking about this approach to government, which of the following statements comes closest to your view, even if neither is exactly right?

This would promote Americans' personal economic freedom, because average people would be more financially secure and able to pursue a higher standard of living.	62	80	59	47	68	60	62	62	66	60	61	66	63
This would limit Americans' personal economic freedom, because major job creators would be burdened with red tape and corporations would have to raise prices.	27	12	29	41	21	30	26	29	21	29	23	22	27
