

DATA FOR PROGRESS

From December 9 to 10, 2023, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1,220 U.S. likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, geography, and voting history. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error is ± 3 percentage points.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=1,220 unless otherwise specified.

[1] Recently, the Biden administration announced that Medicare will now be allowed to negotiate directly with drug companies to lower the prices of 10 prescription drugs.

In response, big pharmaceutical companies and trade associations filed a series of lawsuits against the Biden administration. These lawsuits argue that allowing Medicare to negotiate with drug companies to lower prescription drug prices is unconstitutional.

Which of the following comes closest to your view, even if neither is exactly right?

I oppose these lawsuits, because we should continue allowing Medicare to negotiate lower drug prices with pharmaceutical companies. There is no reason why Americans should be forced to pay more than any other developed nation for life-saving prescriptions just to pad Big Pharma's pockets.	73	74	75	70	73	73	62	79	74	71	62	76	60
I support these lawsuits, because we should stop Medicare from being allowed to negotiate lower drug prices with pharmaceutical companies. Pharmaceutical companies are responsible for the research and development of new drugs in the U.S., and negotiating drug prices could hinder new progress in medicine.	17	18	10	21	14	20	26	11	15	20	26	15	24
