

DATA FOR PROGRESS

From April 26 to 29, 2024, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1,238 U.S. likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, geography, and voting history. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error is  $\pm 3$  percentage points.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=1,238 unless otherwise specified.

[24] Recently passed federal legislation will give communities across the country funding for new infrastructure development projects, such as renewable energy and public transportation.

Some groups are proposing that these projects be publicly owned, meaning community members living nearby would have a say in decisions related to the project through elected boards or direct voting power. This would allow residents in the area to negotiate their interests with the project developer, like ensuring local hiring for the project and deciding how to use any profits generated to benefit the community.

Would you approve or disapprove of a new clean energy or infrastructure project being developed in your community if the project is publicly owned?

[26] Some groups are proposing that new clean energy and infrastructure development projects, such as renewable energy and public transportation, be publicly owned, meaning community members living nearby would have a say in decisions related to the project through elected boards or direct voting power. This would allow residents in the area to negotiate their interests with the project developer, like ensuring local hiring for the project and deciding how to use any profits generated to benefit the community.

Which of these best describes how you think ownership and profits of new infrastructure development projects should be distributed between communities and project developers, even if none are exactly right?
