

From November 21 to 25, 2025, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1,230 U.S. likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, geography, and recalled presidential vote. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error associated with the sample size is ±3 percentage points. Results for subgroups of the sample are subject to increased margins of error. Partisanship reflected in tabulations is based on self-identified party affiliation, not partisan registration. For more information please visit dataforprogress.org/our-methodology.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 40 (<40) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<40 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=616 unless otherwise specified.

[1] [Split A] As you may know, President Trump is considering an executive order that would give the federal government authority over artificial intelligence (AI) rules nationwide. Under this order, the federal government could withhold federal funding from any state that attempts to pass a law to regulate AI, and could challenge these state laws in court.

Which of the following comes closer to your view, even if neither is exactly right? (N=614)

[2] [Split B] As you may know, some federal lawmakers are considering a national policy that would give the federal government authority over artificial intelligence (AI) rules nationwide. Under this policy, the federal government could withhold federal funding from any states that attempt to regulate AI, and could challenge these state laws in court.
