

From April 3 to 6, 2026, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 1,213 U.S. likely voters nationally using web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, geography, and recalled presidential vote. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error associated with the sample size is ± 3 percentage points. Results for subgroups of the sample are subject to increased margins of error. Partisanship reflected in tabulations is based on self-identified party affiliation, not partisan registration. For more information please visit dataforprogress.org/our-methodology.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 50 (<50) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<50 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=1,213 unless otherwise specified.

[2] The Supreme Court is currently considering whether to uphold or strike down a portion of the 1965 Voting Rights Act, which prohibits states from drawing election maps to deny minority groups representation. If the Supreme Court decides to strike down that law, how likely do you think it is that each of the following will happen?

— Politicians redraw districts to split apart minority communities so they are less likely to be able to elect leaders who represent their interests.
